

ABSTRACT

The starting point of the writing of this thesis was because of the writer's curiosity about the political affairs which are happening in the world today. Until now, communism is the political ideology which is avoided by most people in the world, especially those who love freedom. They consider it as the worst, cruelest, and forbidden ideology to be learned or known. The curiosity makes the writer want to know more about the political situation when the Communist Party in the U.S.S.R. started to spread its influence throughout the world.

The study was done by analyzing three of George Orwell's novels containing his political views: Homage to Catalonia, Animal Farm, and Nineteen Eighty-Four. The analysis of the novels aims at finding out the similarities and differences of the three novels dealing with their political aspects. So by comparing the three novels, the writer is able to conclude what Orwell's views about the political situation at the time he lived. And the result of the study is that the writer finds out that communism is forbidden, because the people who spread communism often betray its main idea, and lead its followers to adopt totalitarianism - the ideology which can only make people suffer for the rest of their lives.
