

ABSTRACT

Reading Graham Greene's Catholic novels is not as difficult as what the readers always think because he presents his novels in a very universal way in terms of faith, crisis of conscience and its resolution.

The material chosen for this study is Graham Greene's four major catholic novels; The Brighton Rock, The Power and the Glory, The Heart of the Matter, The End of the Affair. The reason for choosing them is because those novels have similar themes concerning catholicism.

This study has a single aim at analyzing those four novels in terms of their elements of novel such as: plot, setting, character, language devices, the way of telling the story, also the different and similar aspects of the novels in general.

After reading the summaries and analyzing the novels I can conclude that within those novels, Graham Greene has successfully revealed the reality of life to his readers. He picks up all human's personalities that are familiar to his readers. Or even the readers themselves are the images of each character in his story.

Graham Greene is an expert in telling the story of human beings especially the seediness of human behavior that nobody can deny. That is why he becomes one of the finest authors the English people ever have.
