

Banning Sermons on Leadership Khilafah on TV during Ramadhan

[Antonius Herujiyanto AH03_030518]

The Commissioner of KPI or the Indonesian Broadcasting Commission, Nuning Rodiyah, has demanded that Islamic preachers or Dai be careful and avoid delivering sermons on leadership khilafah in Islam on TV stations during the month of Ramadhan (on 16 May-14 June).

Mentioning some of the requirements of political leadership in Islam, she mentioned, among others, to be amanah, namely, being responsible for his or her job and authority; to be fair in the sense of having the ability to appropriately put and regard anything correctly and proportionately; to be obedience to Allah and Prophet Muhammad; to implement Koran and Sunnah.

Nuning also said Wednesday (on 2 May) that such a strong warning, that Dai not to preach on leadership khilafah and political affairs in Islam, was meant to prevent conflicts from taking place since the regional elections were also taking place during the month of Ramadhan.

According to her, KPI would also co-ordinate with the Indonesian Ulema Council or MUI if some preachers were found to have called on the people to vote only for Muslim candidates.

She also said that her office would first consult with MUI whether or not the preaching was in line with Islamic teachings.
