A social media activist, Denny Siregar, has made use of his Facebook account to spread up his recent article on the relation between cleric Abu Jibril and the movement of Presidium #2019GantiPresiden or the hash tag #2019ChangePresident movement, as well as Al Qaeda.

The cleric's true name is Fihiruddin Muqti, an Islamic activist from Lombok, West Nusa Tenggara province. Not only is he the founder of Arrahmah.com, but he is also one of the former students of cleric Abdullah Sungkar, the founder of Ngruki pesantren [Islamic boarding school], Solo. [Both cleric Abdullah Sungkar and Abu Bakar Ba'asyir are the founders of Jamaah Islamiyah Movement. It used to send its followers to conduct jihad in Afghanistan.]

In response to Denny Siregar's article, one of cleric Abu Jibril's sons, Muhammad Jibriel Abdul Rahman clarified, that it was such an untrue information with wrong accusations.

According to him, Denny Siregar must have been mixed up his father, Abu Jibriel Abdul Rahman and another cleric named Abu Jibril Fuad.

He said Thursday (on 12 July) that his father has got nothing to do with the hash tag #2019GantiPresiden movement and Al Qaeda especially that his father has been ill for some time.

Showing a poster on "Great Declaration" of National volunteers on #2019ChangePresident movement to take place on 6 May 2018, he pointed out the name "Abu Jibril Fuad" on it.

Mentioning that many of Denny's articles spread up on social media were hoax and fake ones, Muhammad Jibriel Abdul Rahman said that Denny had revealed his own mask, declaring and pretending to be the only one who was expert on issues of tolerance, radicalism and terrorism. Besides, most of Denny's articles had been first carried on many different Shi'ah and liberal websites.

Muhammad Jibriel also said the he would not go to the police to file a report on Denny Siregar since he would not want to become the one to be investigated by the police.
