This study aims to find out ;(1) the use of spare time and the student's learning activities; (2) the use of spare time and student's academic achievements; (3)the use of spare time and integration of the part-time worker student's work loyalty. This type of research is a correlational research conducted from May 2019 to June 2019.

The subjects of the study were the students who belong to part-time workers at "Starbucks" Yogyakarta and "IMBA Coffee" Yogyakarta. The numbers of respondents were 87 students. The hypothesis was examined by using the Spearman's rank and Pearson's product moment theory.

The results show that: 1) there is no relation between the use of the spare time and part-time worker students' learning activities which is proved by Pearson's correlation = 0.143 and sig. 2-tailed = 0.186; 2) there is no relation between the use of the spare time and the academic achievement of part-time worker students which is indicated by the correlation coefficient = 0.216 and sig. 2-tailed = 0.045; 3) there is a relation between the use of spare time and part-time worker student's loyalty and working integrity related to Pearson's correlation = 0.007 and the value of sig. 2-tailed = 0.950.

Keywords: the use of spare time, learning activities, academic achievement, loyalty, and working integrity
