During the pandemic, the enthusiasm of SDN Depok 1 students to be involved in learning activities decreased due to changes in the learning climate, which is usually done in the classroom, now students study at home. This study aims to determine the description of students' learning motivation during distance learning and the percentage level of learning motivation. in the context of the pandemic to be used as a reference by teachers and parents in accompanying students during the learning process from home. The research technique used is descriptive quantitative analysis with a survey method that uses data collection techniques with questionnaires guided by six indicators of learning motivation according to Uno 2007 and adjusted by researchers to study conditions during the pandemic. then the questionnaire was distributed to the respondents and the results of the data obtained were analyzed by the researcher. Based on the results of data analysis, it is known that the learning motivation of SDN Depok 1 students is included in the good category.

The results showed that the description of the learning motivation of grade IV & V SDN Depok 1 students when participating in distance learning during the pandemic was in the very good 15% category, 70% good category and 15% moderate category. The level of student learning motivation is in the good category. The level of learning motivation is obtained that students' learning motivation is 30% very high, 60% high and 10% moderate. Category low/poor and very low 0%. The conclusion of this study is that students' learning motivation is still quite good and high for the percentage level. This proves that the distance learning process is still getting good support and adjustment from students as well as teachers and parents/guardians of students. Distance learning that was implemented during the Covid-19 pandemic did not become a barrier for the world of education to continue to carry out learning.
