This research aims to (1) Describe the level of learning motivation of female and male students receiving KIP-K scholarships class of 2023 at Sanata Dharma University. (2) Knowing the differences in the level of learning motivation of students receiving the KIP-K scholarship class of 2023 at Sanata Dharma University in terms of gender. (3) Identifying items with low scores as a basis for proposing appropriate guidance service topics to help increase learning motivation among scholarship recipient students.

This type of research uses quantitative methods with comparative descriptive analysis units. The subjects in this research were students who received the KIP-K scholarship class of 2023 at Sanata Dharma University, totaling 70 students from a total population of 114 students. The questionnaire was prepared based on aspects of learning motivation according to Santrock (2004). Data collection used a questionnaire with 53 valid items with a Cronbach's Alpha reliability index of 0.901.

The research results show that there is no significant difference in the level of learning motivation between female and male students as seen from the p value of $0.286 > 0.05$. Women have a very high level of learning motivation and men have a high level of learning motivation. The average frequency of women's learning motivation level is 14 (40%) in the very high category index while for men it is 16 (46%) in the high category index. The results of the categorization of instrument items found that 6 (10%) items were classified as medium and 1 (2%) item score was classified as low. The researcher proposed 5 guidance topics based on items with scores that were not optimal.
