This research uses a qualitative method. Data was collected through in-depth interviews, participatory observation, and document analysis. The participants of this study were the medior sisters in the La Verna Community, selected through purposive sampling. The research findings show that the experience of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary spirituality greatly affects the sisters' daily practices, including the quality of their prayer life, involvement in liturgy, and community service. Medior sisters who have a deep spiritual experience tend to exhibit higher levels of religious life and greater social concern. Age and years of experience in the Congregation were found to have a positive correlation with the depth of their spirituality.
