The aim of this research is to analyze the influence of growth, liquidity, and postponement of dividend payment to going concern audit opinion.

The research was an empirical study. The samples used in this research were manufacturing companies listed in Indonesian Stock Exchange in 2010-2014. Those companies were selected by using purposive sample method. There were 24 companies. The data were tested by logistic regression analysis.

The result showed that liquidity was the only factor, which significantly influenced the going concern audit opinion. In contrast, growth and postponement of dividend payment did not have any significant influence to going concern audit opinion.
